The lab is part of the Steward Observatory, which is the name of the Astronomy department at the University of Arizona. The lab produces the largest glass mirrors in the world, for use in mountain top astronomical observatories throughout North and South America. Within the lab, there are typically four to six mirrors in various stages of production at any given time. These mirrors range in size from 21 feet to 28 feet in diameter and can weigh as much as 40,000 pounds.

Due to the need to store mirrors that are not actively in process, it is essential that we install a system to stack these mirrors until processing can be resumed. The mirror stacking stand detailed in the drawings denoted in this RFB has been designed to support a single 8.4 meter mirror at each of two elevated positions, one above the other.

5.3 Overview. The mirror stacking stand will be assembled as two stand-alone structures designated level 1 and level 2. Figure 1 (below) shows the two levels as they must be installed in the Mirror Lab Integration Lab. The Integration Lab is a large high bay assembly area with a 55 ton bridge crane and a sliding door that provides an opening 34 feet wide and 42 feet tall. The bridge crane can traverse the length of the Integration Lab, and out on to a raised loading dock that extends 80 feet to the North of the door.

5.5.9 Install grout per drawing notes between the base plates on the four vertical columns of the Level 1 assembly and the 8 inch thick slab of the Integration Lab.

5.5.10 The anchoring system will consist of 1”-8 female threaded inserts, epoxy set into core drilled holes, with threaded studs, leveling nuts and retaining nuts. Leveling height will be adjusted to provide a 1” nominal gap to the floor for grouting. Threaded inserts may be purchased items or manufactured by vendor. Vendor will specify type of insert for owner approval.
